Capital Traction Continues Tells Public to Watch Out for Dangerous ."Itinerent Venders."

> The public is warned of take itinerant venders of merchandise in the following statement issued today by Charles J. Columbus, secretary of the Retail Merchants' Association. It says:

"Reports have reached the office of the Retail Merchants' Association that fur vendors and 'imported gown' deal-ers are going to make Washington their ers are going to make Washington their mecca for the Christmas shopping season, establishing themselves in hotels and other temporary locations for the express purpose of putting it over during the holidays and then leaving for other parts.

"In very many cities and States of the country there are itinerant merchant laws which makes fake periodical merchandise setups impossible. The city of Richmond has found such a la wa wonderful protection to the public. It has been the experience throughout the country that the visits of itinerant merchants to hotels and other places are usually followed by complaints on the part of purchasers.

"We are keeping a close tab on such matters and expect, in the absence of a special law covering such sales, to invoke not only the false advertising law, but in instances the fake auction law.

"However, an ounce of prefention is ever worth a pound of cure, and the public interest will be best safeguarded by dealing only with merchants who are established in bustness here. Our advertising vigilance committee, made up of six of our members and representatives of half a hundred citisens associations will see to it that the public interest is safeguarded, but we cannot reach the fake itinerant vendor."

OUSTED BY PUBLIC OPINION

Britain Resented Vacilhation and Indecision of Prime Minister.

LONDON, Dec. 6.—Premier Asquith's Florida avenue." fall was due to public opinion—not to political intrigue.

Lloyd-George's uncompromising at titude of the past few days an attitude in which he was cordially ported by such of his former political opponents as Andrew Bonar Law and Sir Edward Carson-was simply the concrete expression of popular resentment at the ineptitude of the Asquith

"The night is the answer to the question How Can We Reach the Foreigner?" the speaker declared.

He indicated that the enrollment ir night schools this year was a fourth larger than last year. He gave a description of the methods used in Jefferson and Thomson night schools. He declared that by the intensification of the work on the aliens in the District city. conlition regime. It represented the profound and country-wide conviction that an entire new deal was necessary if the the work on the aliens in the District city.

this could be made a real American Commissioner Caminetti took in his address the work done by the Bureau of Immigration, in training aliens for citizenship. He described how are an alien child arrived at a United States port notification of the fact was sent to the school superintendent of the district of his destination.

He urged the thorough co-ordinawar was to be prosecuted intelligently, energetically and efficiently. It was the concrete expression of popular fear that England could not win without such a step.

heskation, indecision vaciliation regarding great war prob-lems which has characterized the administration in months past has been curiously exemplified in Asquith's personal handling of the cabinet crisis. He did not finally give up hope of averting it until he received an ulti-matum from the Unionists late yes-This ultimatum followed Lloyd-George's definite refusal further to continue as a member of the min In it the Unionists unqualifiedly pledged their association summoning Bonar Law, instead of Lloyd-George, to head the new ministry. In tendering the premiership to Bonar Law, King eGorge followed constitutional precedent, which requires such a proffer should first be made to the leader of the largest party in the House of Commons.

Mantle Falls To Lloyd-George. After the declaration of Bonar Law to form a ministry, undoubtedly the task will next fall on Lloyd-George. The retiring minister of war and Sir Edward Carson are in entire agreement with Bonar Law. Both will assist him to the fullest extent in his effort to form a desirable cabinet, which it is generally hoped will be non-partisan and national in characters.

The whole situation today was a melting pot of efforts. It is problematical how the Liberal, Labor, and Irish parties will line up. Sir Edward Carson was credited with formulating a spectacular coup for the purpose of enlisting support of the Irish Nationalists, whereby the whole of Irish including Ulster, would be offered home rule, on the basis of consent by the Nationalists to an extension of conscription to Ireland. The Carson proposal, it was reported, would also permit Ulster, after three years trial, to decide whether to remain.

of 10 per cent of the employe's annual salary, to all workers getting not more than $2,500 a year, who have been working for the company for not less than two years, and who are not being paid in accordance with present or former contract schedules.

The Western Union Telegraph Company was the other concern to decide on substantial bonuses. It will pay approximately $25 as a bonus to measure the period of a year's pay to other employes getting less than $1,200, and 6 per cent to those getting more than $1,200 and less than $2,000.

This does not apply to cable operators, who already have received special payments this year, or to those who main.

Late today, however, Sir Edward Carson categorically denied he had made any such proposals.

Extension of conscription to Ireland would immediately add 150,000 men to Great Britain's forces.

There was much speculation today as to Asquith's future. It is thought possible he may become lord chancellor. payments this year, or to those who have not been in the employ of the concern continuously since January 1, 1916.
